

A typical day on our planet is....

When citizens of Trutrit wake up they are required to eat breakfast to boost their daily activity. Breakfast foods can range from meats, cheeses, bread, toppings and fruits. A traditional breakfast is a fruit smoothie and some waffles topped with strawberries and blueberries. Each morning we are required to take showers to ensure personal health. We wear a different outfit every day. The same outfit cannot be worn within the same two weeks.

The family has one car. They all ride with each other to work, school, daycare, or possibly the C.R. if there is a sick family member. Adults are to drive and can get their driving license at the age of 18. At school children are required to stay for 8 hours a day. They study the following-

1. Math
2. Science
3. Social Studies
- Lunch
4. Communication Arts
5. Reading

And then after school they go to the sport that they signed up for. They practice for 2 hours. Their parents have a variety of work. Some are doctors, dentists, and trash men, whatever! Most family's parents include one good income job and a fair other one.

When children and parents get home they work on homework and parents will cook supper. People then shower and eat supper. Most suppers are Mexican. The Mexican suppers are called jubé. That is the traditional name of it. Another traditional meal is drando. That is pasta. All families eat together no matter what unless one is sick at the C.R. After supper they have a family sessions that involves them sharing their day and they go off to bed. The cycle continues.
